You did it!

The New England JLC is proud to have stood on the picket lines with the Marriott Hotel workers.

Read all about it in The Boston Globe:

"Striking Marriott employees will return to work Wednesday after members of the union representing the workers overwhelmingly approved a new contract Saturday with the hotel chain...

The new contract met the union's goals, [Brian Lang, President of Unite

Here Local 26] said, including higher wages and ensuring employees are being scheduled to work enough hours to make a viable living...

The new contract will also include better sexual harassment protections for women, paid parental leave, and other improvements in working conditions."
